Below the list, there is a pagination bar showing 'Page : 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 Next Page > (Total 100 Pages)'. The detailed article for the first news item is displayed below, starting with the title 'DJ Amgen to Buy Stake in Chinese Cancer-Drugmaker BeiGene -- Update' and the date '2019-11-01 11:13'. The article is attributed to Allison Prang and Jared S. Hopkins and discusses Amgen's acquisition of a 20% stake in BeiGene Ltd. for $2.7 billion in cash. The article mentions that BeiGene will commercialize certain Amgen treatments in China and will split those earnings or losses. It also notes that BeiGene will take three different Amgen products to market: Xgeva, a prescription bone treatment; Kyprolis, a treatment for myeloma; and Blincyto, a leukemia treatment. The article further states that BeiGene will ultimately be able to retain the rights to one of those treatments and earn royalties on the others for an additional five years after the commercialization period. Amgen said Xgeva was introduced in China last month. The other two treatments are in Phase III trials. BeiGene and Amgen also will collaborate on 20 of Amgen's oncology medicines. Amgen said that BeiGene will help cover expenses for research and development "and contribute up to $1.25 million to advance these medicines." Amgen expects the deal to close early next year. The article concludes by mentioning that China has increasingly been approving foreign drugs, following a series of policy moves by China to provide its huge population with new treatments, particularly those that treat cancer. Merck & Co. earlier this week reported that sales grew by 90% in China during the third-quarter. AstraZeneca Chief Executive Pascal Soriot said last year that he expected China to eventually overtake Europe as the company's second-largest market. The merger of Pfizer Inc.'s off-patent drug
